Yugoslavia - Nonaligned States: (Yugoslavia has apparently succeeded in its efforts to start preparations for an international conference of neutralist-leaning trade unions. Belgrade hopes to hold the conference in Morocco, perhaps as early as December.)

25X1

25X1 [REDACTED]

(Yugoslavia has been attempting since the Belgrade Conference of September 1961 to increase the influence of the nonaligned states in many areas of international activity. In the trade-union sphere Yugoslav unionists have visited their counterparts in many countries in recent months and have secured the support of the Moroccan Trade Union and the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan (Sohyo). The union confederations in the UAR, Ghana, and Guinea may also join in sponsoring the conference.)

DAILY BRIEF

Brazil: With less than half the votes counted, the returns in the Brazilian election are still inconclusive.

The gubernatorial races remain unsettled except in Sao Paulo where conservative machine politician Adhemar de Barros is decisively ahead of ex-President Janio Quadros. In the state of Guanabara, Eloy Dutra, an enemy of anti-Communist Governor Lacerda, appears to have won the vice-governorship.

In six other gubernatorial elections contested between conservatives and leftists, conservatives are leading in five, although their lead is very narrow in Pernambuco and Sergipe. Extreme leftist Silveira maintains his lead in the state of Rio de Janeiro. In four elections both candidates are relatively conservative.

Returns from the Senate election indicate that the new Senate will retain its traditional strongly conservative orientation. Extreme leftists are likely, however, to increase their representation from the two seats held by leftist ultranationalists in the last Senate.

Almost no returns are available for the federal Chamber of Deputies, except in the state of Guanabara where the leftist Labor Party - Socialist slate appears to have increased its representation from one third to one half of the state's delegation. Election results in Guanabara are more favorable to the extreme leftists than results are likely to be in the country as a whole.

Argentina: [Minister of Economy Alvaro Alsogaray may be forced to resign in the near future. Alsogaray has advocated strong policies of retrenchment and reform but has so far failed to place these in effect.]

[US Ambassador McClintock reports that Alsogaray is under increasing public attack by a variety of political elements blaming him for the continuing economic crisis. The 10 October resignations of the vice president and a director of the central bank in protest against Alsogaray's performance were the latest in a series deliberately aimed at discrediting him. The former defense and interior ministers have publicly charged him with corruption. Similar attacks have been made by Peronist labor elements as well as influential business leaders.]

[Alsogaray is scheduled to visit Paris later this month for talks with representatives of European sources of investment. The Italian ambassador in Buenos Aires told the US Embassy on 9 October that he fears the European countries would refuse Argentina extensions on past debts and future credits if Alsogaray is forced to resign.]
